Auburndale, Mch. 13th.

Dearest A.W., I am so near you every day, and never get no forrader. You seem I become quite used up, and am glad to escape Auburndalewards at the end of the full (but pleasant) day, and stretch my bones in bed by 8.30. I fancy another week will end it. The whole business is quite a godsend, as nobody will take the long article I had cunningly planned to float me over March and April! Things are much more serene hereabouts, but my beloved Frohock's go in another month. I am glad you did not disapprove of my putting him up to make inquiries of you, whether Mr. Stone might possibly have room for someone of R. R. F.'s great experience, trustworthiness, and diligence. He is a complete jewel in his way. Only as Mr. Stone has a hundred calls per day upon him, and must sit in a tangle of cosmic wires, I wonder if you would be so good as to arrange a quarter-hour private interview of the two men, in case, that is, of there being any chance at all that your man would want my man? Q. E. D.

Mrs. Frohock was vastly taken with the little extract from your verses which Mr. Pratt uses on his Lenten leaflet. She says you have big horizons. Hooray! Rather!!
Yours with love always,

L. S. G.
